Teaching Experience

Social Insurance: Goethe University Frankfurt 2018-2019

This is an advanced undergraduate course that covers topics on the provision of social insurance. It includes the role of government in the economy, externalities and public goods, social insurance and redistribution, and taxation. We discuss both theoretical and empirical tools of public economics.

Mathematical Methods: Goethe University Frankfurt 2018-2019

This is a first year PhD course on numerical methods in economics. The course covers four basic tools for numerical analysis: solution of (non-)linear systems of equations, (constrained) optimization, function approximation, and numerical integration and differentiation.

Quantitative Microeconomics: Universidad Carlos III de Madrid 2017-2018

This is an advanced course in microeconometrics. The course includes Maximum Likelihood estimation, Discrete Response, Censored Regression, and Panel data models. I taught this course in English and Spanish.

Macroeconomics: Universidad Carlos III de Madrid

2017-2018

This is a second year Macro course. We cover topics like the determination of output, employment, interest rates, and inflation; monetary and fiscal policies in the short and in the long run; and an introduction to international economics.

Applied Economics: Universidad Carlos III de Madrid

2011 - 2018

I was responsible for the design of an entirely new course. In this practical course, taught in English and Spanish, students obtain hands-on experience in the use of econometric techniques, and learn to use econometric software to address real-world problems. The topics covered in the course range from basic OLS, IV, Diff-in-diff, to an introduction to panel data. Students learn to apply these methods in gretl, an open-source econometrics software that they can use in their later careers. This course is mandatory for students majoring in Economics and in Law and Economics. I coordinated this course of about 250 students per year, and taught in English and Spanish.

Econometrics: Universidad Carlos III de Madrid

2008 - 2010

This is an introductory course in econometrics in which students learn basic tools as OLS, IV, and non-linear regression models. This course is mandatory for students majoring in Economics, Law and Economics, and Business Administration (ADE). I taught this course in English and Spanish.
